This booklet is intended to provide information on graduate study in the Department of Sociology at the University of California at Berkeley and to provide general information on extra-departmental matters pertaining to graduate students in the department. It is intended to introduce the Ph.D. program to prospective applicants and to aid them in deciding whether or not to pursue the application process.

If after reading this booklet you would like to apply to the doctoral program, call or email the graduate assistant, specifying that you have received this handbook, and a complete application will be sent to you.

OUTSIDE THE US: We must receive a $13 US fee, payable to UC Regents, before we can mail application packets outside North America. This fee must be in the form of a check or money order cashable through U.S. banks.

I. INTRODUCTION

For over 50 years Berkeley's Department of Sociology has been world-renowned for its excellence. Always ranked among the top few departments, its historical combination of intellectual diversity and originality continues to flower. At Berkeley, students experience the variety of international sociology and make their own contribution to that variety.

The special character of Berkeley's graduate program is its emphasis on individual interests, combined with rigorous training in theory and method. Rejecting orthodoxy, the department's structure and culture support students who pursue their own intellectual concerns, stimulated and helped by the faculty and their peers. The department encourages theoretical ambition and original empirical research. It provides depth training in:

Asian societies	Latin America
Culture	Organizations
Demography	Political sociology
Development	Quantitative methods
Eastern Europe	Sexuality
Education	Social history
Ethnicity and race	Social movements
Ethnographic methods	Stratification and class
Family	Theory
Gender	Urban studies
Labor	Immigration

Our students have customarily found academic positions at other leading departments. Members of recent cohorts have been offered faculty positions at Harvard, Chicago, Michigan, NYU, Wisconsin, Yale, and the various UC campuses, among others.

The academic program in sociology begins with the regularly scheduled courses and seminars. They are augmented by individually designed reading courses, as well as by departmental colloquia, personal advising and supervision by faculty, informal study groups with peers, a student-organized conference, and teaching opportunities at the undergraduate level.

Development of research expertise is fostered through course offerings in the logic of research, basic statistics, and optional courses covering a wide range of methods. In addition, department faculty are affiliated with twenty-four research institutes of UC Berkeley. Research assistantships, awarded through these institutes, are a common part of many students' training.

II. ADMISSION

The graduate program in sociology is intended to lead to the awarding of the Ph.D. degree. Applicants are not admitted to pursue the M.A. degree only, although the M.A. is awarded to students in the course of working toward the Ph.D. Applicants may also be admitted for "coursework only" status for a limit of one year. In this instance no degree is awarded. Students with the M.A. or some other advanced degree may also apply. Applications are considered once a year for Fall admission only. The department is strongly committed to increasing ethnic diversity in the discipline.

Beginning in September applications may be requested for the following academic year. All applicants (including international students) must submit the following: the application, including a statement of purpose, two sets of transcripts, an official report of the general portion of the Graduate Record Examination, three letters of recommendation (preferably from social science faculty familiar with the applicant's recent academic work) and a sample of written academic work in English. Deadline for admission for Fall 2007 is December 15, 2006. It is the responsibility of the applicant to ascertain that application materials have been received by the department. All material should be sent by the December deadline. In the last five years, the department has been able to admit only 10-15% of applicants.

It is not possible to apply concurrently to more than one department at UCB. Before deciding to apply to the Department of Sociology, you may wish to request information on the graduate programs of the following separate units. All addresses are University of California, Berkeley, CA 94720.

III. ACADEMIC PROGRESS

The graduate program in sociology consists of three phases. In the first phase, which is expected to take two years and culminates in the M.A. degree, students become acquainted with major sociological theories, basic sociological methods and two or more subfields of the discipline through a minimum of 26 units of coursework and preparation of a Master's paper. The second phase of work, which is expected to take two years, involves a minimum of 9 further units of coursework. It culminates in the Ph.D. Qualifying Examination, covering two subfields and theory. This milestone is expected to be completed by the end of the fourth year. The final phase is the Ph.D. dissertation. Preparation of a dissertation prospectus and advancement to candidacy are expected to follow promptly after satisfactory completion of the qualifying examination. Students are expected to complete all work for the Ph.D. degree by the end of the sixth year of graduate study.

IV. FINANCIAL AID

There are many agencies not connected with the University that provide financial aid to students pursuing higher degrees. The Graduate Division maintains a file of information on such sources of support, indexed by field of study, which is available to students who are already in residence. For students not yet at Berkeley, the Graduate Division will answer specific inquiries from students who have been admitted to graduate study at Berkeley. Try this link: <http://www.grad.berkeley.edu/grad/> for general information about fellowships and financial aid at UC Berkeley or <http://www.grad.berkeley.edu/fellowships/index.shtml> for fellowships resources on the web. There is an extensive collection of books and manuals listing funding sources, private and public, in the Reference Room of Doe Library on campus. Other information is available from the Office of Financial Aid, 201 Sproul Hall, which determines financial eligibility for all university funds which stipulate financial need as a requirement. The Department has some information available as well.

Students interested in fellowship opportunities should also consult the following publications:

1. The National Science Foundation's Division of Graduate Education sponsors a website with helpful links to various sources of funding: <http://www.ehr.nsf.gov/dge/programs/grf/othfell1.asp>
2. The Association of American Colleges publishes Financial Aid: A Resource for Women, 6th edition by Julie Kuhn Ehrhart and Amanda Lepof (1998). To order, see their web site: <http://www.aacu.edu.org/publications/> click on the link for "alphabetical list of Publications/Online Ordering.
3. The Social Science Research Council, 230 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10017, sponsors graduate research and also provides a list of potential sources of support from other agencies. http://www.ssrc.org/fellowships/general_information/
4. The U.S. Department of Education publishes a booklet, "The Student Guide", available on the web at http://studentaid.ed.gov/students/publications/student_guide/index.html or call 1-800-433-3243 to request a copy.

Search Engines:

There are dozens of financial aid search engines. Here are two that you may find useful:

Check out Cornell's database <http://cuinfo.cornell.edu/Student/GRFN/>. It allows you to narrow your search by keywords (such as subfields) and timeframes (deadlines).

UCLA's "Grapes" website is useful as well. <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu/grpinst.htm>

A. Extra-Mural Fellowship Sources

Since both the University and the Department of Sociology at Berkeley have only limited resources for the support of incoming students, you are urged to apply for outside fellowship support.

Applying for support monies requires advance thought and planning. First, applications must often be made a year or more in advance of when the money is needed; application deadlines are seasonal, the majority occurring in late fall and winter, with very few in spring or summer. Second, the application process is time-consuming. Application forms must be obtained from the agency, then completed, often with lengthy personal essays and cumbersome documentation. Third, application materials must be gathered together, several recommendations must be secured, and all must arrive at the awarding agency's office before the deadline date. Finally, deadlines are firm. Students should allow at least two months for the application process, more for an initial application.

The following partial list of fellowship opportunities is specifically for entering students, with or without previous graduate work.

1. American Indian Graduate Center

Fellowships for American Indian and Alaskan Native students from federally recognized tribes. <http://www.aigc.com> Award amount based on need.

2. American Sociological Association Minority Fellowship Program

<http://www.asanet.org/student/mfp.html> or email minority.affairs@asanet.org
Anticipated deadline is December, please check their web site for exact date.
$16500 plus tuition.

3. Foreign Language and Area Studies Fellowships (FLAS). The stipend for incoming graduate students is 15,000, plus tuition and fees. Entering students apply for FLAS fellowships by completing Form D in the Graduate Application for Admission and Fellowships.

4. Ford Foundation Pre-doctoral Fellowships for Minorities.

<http://national-academies.org/opportunities/> or call (202) 334-2872
Anticipated deadline is November, please check their web site for exact date.
This year's amounts have not been announced in time for this printing. Last year they paid $16,000 plus excess from tuition payment of $7,500.

5. Jacob K. Javits Fellowship Program

<http://www.ed.gov/offices/OPE/HEP/iegps/javits.html> or call (202) 502-7542
Anticipated deadline is November, please check their web site for exact date.
This year's amounts have not been announced in time for this printing. Last year they paid up to $21,500 plus fees/year for up to 4 years

6. Japanese American Citizens League

<http://www.jacl.org/> or call (415) 921-5225

Check their web site for deadlines. Various awards up to $5,000.

7. The Japan Foundation

<http://www.jpff.go.jp/index.html>

Check their web site for deadlines.

8. National Science Foundation Graduate Research Fellowships

<http://www.ehr.nsf.gov/dge/programs/grf/> or call (865) 241-4300

Anticipated deadline is early November, please check their web site for the exact date.
$27,500 plus fees/year for up to 3 years.

9. The Paul & Daisy Soros Fellowships for New Americans

<http://www.pdsoros.org/fullapp.pdf>

November deadline. $20,000.

10. UCB Traineeship in Demography, Department of Demography, 2234 Piedmont Ave., Stipend and fees for students who wish to get training and MA in Demography in addition to degree in Sociology. December 15.

11. UCB Graduate Opportunity Program, through Graduate Division application.
Entering students apply for GOP fellowships by completing Form C in the Graduate Application for Admission and Fellowships. Stipend and fees for U.S.citizens and permanent residents who have overcome adversity.

12. U.C.Berkeley Center for Korean Studies

<http://ieas.berkeley.edu/cks/>

Korea Foundation Graduate Fellowship

For incoming and continuing graduate students. These fellowships may range from $3,000-$12,000. For further information email cks@socrates.berkeley.edu.

B. Financial Aid for Foreign Students

Foreign students seeking financial aid counseling should contact Services to International Students and Scholars, International House, U.C., Berkeley, CA 94720, phone: 642-2818. These advisors are aware of the special needs of foreign students and can answer questions ranging from immigration regulations to financial aid. However, the Foreign Student Advisors Office has no financial aid available for entering foreign students. Students are eligible to apply for aid administered by that office after they have completed two semesters of study at Berkeley (one semester for grants-in-aid).

Foreign applicants for admission should begin their pursuit of financial aid with academic departments or scholarship organizations in their own countries. The following leads may also be of some value:

Foreign students are especially encouraged to apply to:

1. The Fulbright Graduate Student Program <http://www.iie.org/fulbright/ff/>

2. Ford Foundation International Fellowships Program <http://www.fordfound.org/>

3. The International Peace Scholarship

Grants are available to promote world peace and understanding for women who are citizens of any country other than the US or Canada. Anticipated deadline December. Grants up to $5,000/yr for up to 3 years.

For application, write or call Carolyn Larson at (515) 255-3153

International Peace Scholarship/PEO Fund Executive Office, 3700 Grand Avenue, Des Moines IA 50312-2899

E. PROPOSED GRADUATE STUDENT EXPENSE BUDGET

The Office of Financial Aid at UC Berkeley has established these average costs of living for students during the nine-month academic year. This budget provides sufficient money for most students in most circumstances. Actual expenses will vary depending upon life styles, priorities and obligations. This budget is revised every year to account for inflation. It does not include non-resident tuition. See the Graduate Division brochure for this figure.

2006-2007

Office of Financial Aid Student Budget (9 months)

Rent/Utilities ($1079 per month)	$9,708.00
Food ($544 per month)	4,900.00
Personal ($251 per month)	2,262.00
Transportation	2,486.00
Total Living Expenses	$19,356.00
Health	1,458.00
Registration (for California Residents)	7,393.00
Books	1,006.00
TOTAL:	$29,213.00
non-resident tuition & Ed Reg Fee ($267) is	$14,961.00

V. ACADEMIC EMPLOYMENT

A. TEACHING ASSISTANTSHIPS

Teaching experience is an integral and important part of graduate student training. Prospective employers increasingly request a portfolio of teaching experience and philosophy along with the dissertation and publications when they evaluate job applicants. After their first year of graduate study, students can apply to be a Graduate Student Instructor (Teaching Assistant) in a large lecture course. After teaching four semesters, they can apply to teach their own undergraduate seminar.

The current salary for GSIs ranges from $1407.45 to $1675.05 per month for five months; it comes with a partial in-state fee remission. The salary depends on college-level teaching experience. This salary assumes a work week of 20 hours, which is the standard in this department.

Teaching Assistants lead discussion sections, attend lectures, hold office hours and assist in reading and evaluating student work. They must be registered during the semester of their employment.

B. RESEARCH ASSISTANTSHIPS

There is no central administrative source for the awarding of research assistantships. The University has a number of research institutes where a variety of projects are being conducted. Many of the research grants that support this work provide funds for the employment of graduate student research assistants who work together with the faculty associated with the projects. The current salary for research assistants ranges from $1213.00 to $1747.50 per month, in six steps for a 20 hour work week. The salary includes a partial in-state fee remission. The salary level depends on two factors: previous experience as a research assistant and the nature of work being performed in the research assistantship.

A few of the research institutes maintain files of research assistant applications for the use of faculty members who wish to hire assistants; however, in most cases, research assistants are hired directly by faculty members with whom the students have already done academic work. Thus, it is incumbent upon students to initiate ties to faculty members with whom they desire to work as research assistants. It is usually difficult for entering students to arrange research assistantships for their first year.

The following institutes are those with which this department's faculty are affiliated; affiliated faculty are noted beneath the institute's name and address. All addresses are University of California, Berkeley, CA 94720. Institutes that accept applications for research assistantships are noted with an asterisk.

The hiring facility or faculty generally specifies particular requirements for available positions - e.g., computer skills or some training in research methods. Appointments to research assistantships are often for twelve months. There are also occasions when individual faculty members employ research assistants on individual (non-institute) research projects. Such posts are obtained by contacting the appropriate faculty member. Research assistants must be registered during each regular semester of their appointment and are restricted to half-time employment during each regular semester of their appointment.

C. READERSHIPS

The department hires graduate students to assist faculty in reading and evaluating papers and examinations in large undergraduate courses. Readers are usually hired on a semester basis. Readers need not be registered during their period of employment; however, registered graduate students serving as readers are restricted to half-time employment. The current pay for readers who hold at least the bachelor's degree is $9.52 per hour; they too get a partial fee remission.
