Course Description

This course explores the kinds of communities and social interactions that occur online or virtually. In particular we will examine how we construct connections, meaning, self, and identity in the absence of face-to-face interaction. Theories both utopian and dystopian about the virtual world will be discussed: for instance, does the Internet provide a space free from the social inequalities that plague the “real” world or does it exacerbate them?

We will begin the course with general sociological theories about the social construction of reality, the self, and interactions. We will use these as a basis for discussing and explaining online social relations, noting the ways in which these theories help illuminate the virtual world and the gaps that emerge.

We will use empirical research on virtual communities to understand what the online world facilitates and enables that may not be possible offline.

Technology is not, of course, neutral, so we will also take a critical eye to the ways in which new communication technologies are created: within what contexts, by whom, and for what ends. We will interrogate the intersection of society and social media. What are some of the dark sides of social media?
This topic is important not simply because social media and the internet more broadly are so omnipresent and integrated into our daily lives, but because many of you have plans to, or already pursuing, careers related to social media: in engineering, public relations, or perhaps as a micro-celebrity. You need to know what you are participating in and what your participation supports. How can you harness your participation for social good, for social justice?

Keep in mind this is a sociology course. Just to refresh your memory, sociology is the study of human social activity, organization, and interaction. Sociology is about the search for patterned behavior and social, rather than individual, explanations for this behavior. Sociologists look beyond the taken-for-granted notions of our social environment to examine the many layers of social meaning in the human experience. (If this doesn’t sound familiar to you, or you are unclear about the sociological perspective, please refer to your introductory sociology text for a refresher.)

This class will be challenging on a number of levels:

❖ You will be expected to keep up with a number of readings for each class meeting.
❖ These readings will be challenging not only in terms of their length and number, but also in terms of the subject matter presented and the complex theories proposed.
❖ We will be speaking frankly about issues of race, class, gender, and sexuality. Some topics may be challenging in the sense that you may find the subject matter embarrassing or difficult to discuss. Frank discussions and presentation of material may include things that some find offensive or that differ greatly from your own experiences, preferences, and beliefs. It is important that we are non-judgmental.

This course challenges many taken-for-granted assumptions about the social world. Keep in mind that your personal experiences may not match the general sociological insights discussed in the course. This does not negate the insights. Ask yourself why this might be the case. You may not agree with everything we read and discuss, but I expect you to have an open mind and demonstrate your knowledge of the sociological perspective. Disagreements and debates are expected and welcome in this class, however, I will not tolerate personal attacks.
Course Goals
❖ Use a sociological perspective to understand social media
❖ Interrogate how our sense of self is impacted by our increasingly digital world
❖ Understand the origins of social media and how that impacts our use of it
❖ Explore how technological innovations are creating and recreating identity categories
   ❖ Study the impacts this has on our relationships with others, on social institutions, and on everyday life
❖ Examine how neoliberalism is built into social media and how this impacts activism
❖ Look at what privacy and surveillance mean in this context
❖ Introduce critical gender and race theories
❖ Adopt an intersectional understanding of social experiences

Learning Outcomes
By the end of the semester you should be able to:
❖ Explain the sociological perspective
❖ Connect sociological theories to the social world and your experiences
❖ Critically analyze media / “common sense” understandings of the Internet and social media
❖ Utilize a critical gender and race perspective
❖ Understand how our experiences online are shaped by sociocultural forces
❖ Explain how social media (re)creates social inequality
❖ Write succinct papers that effectively synthesize course materials and apply theory

Required Texts

Marwick, Alice E. 2013. Status Update: Celebrity, Publicity, and Branding in the Social Media Age. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press. (Available as a PDF on bCourses)

Additional Readings: Available digitally on bCourses and as a digital or hardcopy reader from Copy Central (they will ship it to you if you are not local).
Assignments

Norm Breaking Paper: You will be given a list of potential norming-breaking tasks related to the digital/online world. You must choose one, undertake it, and write a short, analytical paper.

Disconnect Paper: You will choose a single 24-hour period to go without social media, texting, Internet, apps, and any networked-connected device including phones, laptops, tablets, etc. You will write a paper about your experience reflecting on your feelings and on what it reveals about our relationship to connected devices. You will need to apply course materials to make sense of your experiences.

Essay Exams: Midterm and final exam. You will be responsible for course readings, lectures, and any media presented in the class. These exams will focus on your ability to apply theories and to synthesize and make connections between various readings.

All work must be original (you cannot recycle work from other courses).

Participation: These assignments are designed to keep you motivated and engaged with the course, to provide opportunities for you to check your comprehension, and to prepare for graded assignments. Assignments will be due on Mondays at 11:59pm (exceptions made for Monday holidays—due date is Tuesday). These assignments will be designed to give you a space to practice the skills you will later be graded on. You must complete 10 of the 12 assignments in order to get full credit. You will receive either full credit (10 points) or zero for each assignment.

Grade Breakdown
Norm-Breaking Paper (15%)
Disconnect Paper (15%)
Midterm (25%)
Final Exam (30%)
Participation Assignments (15%)
Course Format and Policies

Readings: Readings should be completed prior to class. You must keep up with the readings to participate in class discussions and complete assignments.

Course Slides: I use course slides which often incorporate media. I will post course slides, but they will only contain the text. Keep in mind that these slides are meant to be a guide during lecture and are therefore not exhaustive or a substitute for attending/watching lecture.

Zoom Etiquette and Tips: Please refer to this guide.

Email: Clearly indicate to which class you are referring in your emails to me. I endeavor to respond to emails within 24 hours, but this is not always possible; please be patient.

Names and Pronouns: You have the right to be referred to by the name you prefer and with the correct gender pronouns. Because the name listed in University records may not correspond to your preferred name, please inform me of your name (and pronunciation) and your pronouns so that I can ensure you are properly recognized and respected.

You can refer to me as Prof. Bakehorn, Dr. Bakehorn, or Jill. My pronouns are she/they.

Grading Policies

No late assignments will be accepted without prior approval; however, I am happy to provide extensions—just ask! Seriously, just ask. Grades are not curved.

All assignments will be checked by TurnItIn for plagiarism. Keep in mind, this program keeps a database of previously turned in papers as well as searching the internet.

Be sure to carefully consider assignment feedback; it is provided to help you improve on future assignments. For in-text feedback, click on the link “View Feedback” which may not be visible if you are not in full-screen mode.

To request a re-grade of an assignment: first, wait 24 hours after the assignment was returned and second, write up a statement detailing why you believe you deserve a higher grade. This statement should be about the substance of your work, not about effort. Be sure to make specific reference to your work, don’t simply say that you responded to the questions asked. Demonstrate how you did so. Request a re-grade within 7 days of the assignment being returned. My assessment and grade of your work will be used, even if that means you get a lower score than originally given for that work.
Academic Dishonesty

The University defines academic misconduct as “any action or attempted action that may result in creating an unfair academic advantage for oneself or an unfair academic advantage or disadvantage for any other member or members of the academic community” (UC Berkeley Code of Student Conduct).

Academic dishonesty includes cheating and plagiarism. Cheating is collaboration with other students on response papers and exams. Plagiarism includes turning in any work that is not your own as well as improper or missing citations of others’ works. As a student of the University of California, you are bound by the Code of Academic Conduct. Any cases of cheating or plagiarism will result in a referral to The Center for Student Conduct and a failing grade for that assignment.

Plagiarism is most likely to occur because students are unaware of how to cite sources or because they feel desperate. If you get to this point in your writing, contact me ASAP rather than doing something you’ll very likely regret. I am happy to help and remember, you can ask for an extension.

Office Hours

Please see Page 1 or this link for information about my office hours. These office hours are specifically for you. We can discuss readings, assignments, post-college plans, existential dread, how to access resources, letters of recommendation, any issues you are having—don’t have to be related to this class, what is bringing you joy, whatever.

If you are having any difficulties with the material or assignments for the course or if you are having any personal problems that are affecting your ability to complete assignments on time, please take advantage of office hours—I am here to help!

Remember that office hours are an important resource if for no other reason than getting to know your instructors could help you in the future when you may need letters of recommendation. You do not need to be struggling or have course-specific questions to go to office hours.

All office hours will be via Zoom.
Student Support Services

Course Accessibility
This course is intended for all UC Berkeley students, including those with mental, emotional, physical, or cognitive disabilities, illnesses, injuries, impairments, or any other condition that can negatively impact equal access to education. If, at any point in the semester, you find yourself not able to fully access the space, content, and experience of this course, you are welcome (but not required) to contact me by email or during office hours to discuss your specific needs.

I also encourage you to contact the Disabled Students’ Program. If you have a diagnosis, DSP can help you document your needs and create an accommodation plan. By making a plan through DSP, you can ensure appropriate accommodations without disclosing your condition or diagnosis to course instructors. As a reminder, you do not need DSP accommodations to ask for an extension.

Student Learning Center
“The primary academic support service for students at Berkeley, the SLC helps students transition to Cal; navigate the academic terrain; create networks of resources; and achieve academic, personal and professional goals.”

Sexual Violence and Harassment Support Services
To learn more about these issues, how to support survivors, or how to file a report and receive support services, start here: http://survivorsupport.berkeley.edu. Please note that I am not a confidential advocate; I am a mandated reporter. You can speak to a Confidential Care Advocate at the Path to Care Center.

Economic, Food, and Housing Support
If you are in need of economic, food, or housing support, you can find help at the Basic Needs Center. You may be eligible for money to buy groceries via Calfresh or our Food Assistance Program. If you are in need of food immediately, please contact our UC Berkeley Food Pantry. More information can be found here.

Mental Health Resources
All students — regardless of background or identity — may experience a range of issues that can become barriers to learning like strained relationships, anxiety, depression, alcohol and other drug problems, difficulties with concentration, sleep, and eating, and/or lack of motivation. UC Berkeley offers many services like Recalibrate and Corona Virus Mental Health Resources.
